Diverse essays reflecting Jonathan Steinberg's methodological pluralism and insatiable curiosity for historical questions which cross disciplinary and geographical boundaries

'A rich collection of essays, whose diversity testifies to the intellectual curiosity and deep humanity of a remarkable scholar and teacher.' — David Reynolds, Professor Emeritus of International History, Cambridge University, UK

This book illustrates and celebrates Professor Jonathan Steinberg's – a celebrated historian of modern Europe, especially Germany, Italy, Austria and Switzerland – contributions to historical practice. Professor Steinberg embraced methodological pluralism and pioneered comparative history, exploring the past through a multi-valent lens that examined the interplay between personalities, nations, and traditions.
