A tracing of the political and feminist significance of non-canonical women poets, Eliza Hamilton Dunlop, Mary Bailey, Caroline Leakey, Emily Manning, and Louisa Lawson, in colonial Australia

This book considers the political and feminist significance of non-canonical women poets, particularly those who were writing in newspapers and periodicals, in colonial Australia.

Readership

It will be particularly of interest to literary, sociological and gender studies. The book will also be of appeal to more general audiences including general public readers, given increasing interest in feminist knowledges and women's literary histories.
