A fresh examination of the ideology, programmes, expressions and consequences of the British 'civilizing mission' in South Asia.

'What is intellectually stimulating is the variety that this volume offers - the ways in which individual essays bring into light a new body of archival sources as well as the manner in which each essay offers a specific geographical-cultural episode of a larger pan-Indian narrative around the colonial "civilizing mission."' —Srirupa Prasad, Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History

Ranging from studies on sport and national education and pulp fiction to infanticide, psychiatric therapy and religion, these essays on the various forms, expressions and consequences of the British 'civilizing mission' in South Asia shed light on a topic that even today continues to be an important factor in South Asian politics.

Readership: These essays provide a fresh analysis for students of British imperialism as well as readers interested in South Asian history or the post-colonial era.
